

About the Teacher

Dr. Anita Archer is an experienced teacher, college professor, researcher and nationally-known consultant. Dr. Archer completed her academic degrees at the University of Washington in the field of special education. Her research interests have focused on the instructional needs of students experiencing learning problems.

She has authored numerous publications, training models, and technical assistance materials. She consults with educators nationally and is known for her expertise on early reading, direct instruction, and work with children with special needs.